of Higgs bosons has just left the production line in Belfast for the Large Hadron Collider (LHC). The four 25-metre-long superconducting magnets that were ordered from the North America's Brookhaven National Laboratory in July 2012 (see 'Tiny, but mighty') are the first of six in an original order for a total of 24. The second and third consignments are already in the process of being manufactured and sent to CERN, the European Organisation for Nuclear Research, which is responsible for the LHC. An industry source quoted by Reuters on June 23 2012, adding a little more detail to the above story: "A
