This invention relates to a method for reclaiming recycle oil in a power system of an internal combustion engine, and, more particularly, to a method for recovering the recycle oil from the power system with a simple configuration. An internal combustion engine is supplied with high-pressure air charged by a supercharger or a turbocharger, and fuel is mixed with the high-pressure air to be burned. In addition, a recycling system is employed to guide at least a part of the exhaust gas exhausted from a combustion chamber back into the combustion chamber for a repetition of the combustion of the fuel. The recycling system includes a turbine supercharger or a turbocharger, and a turbine coupled to the supercharger or the turbocharger. The recycle oil is lubricated in the turbine, in the supercharger or the turbocharger, and in the power transmission system. The recycle oil is a high pressure oil. A pressure-regulating valve is provided for maintaining a predetermined pressure. While the supercharger, the turbocharger, and the like are in operation, the recycle oil is discharged by the pressure-regulating valve. The recycle oil discharged from the pressure-regulating valve contains a large amount of fuel.
