Description of the Background Art A contact between an upper wiring and a lower wiring formed on different layers is a key point of an attempt to achieve a high-speed operation. With an increasing microfabrication of a semiconductor device, a contact resistance, i.e., a resistance between a conductive film (for example, aluminum (Al)) to be a lower wiring and an upper wiring, increases. Therefore, a technology of directly contacting an Al film or the like to be the upper wiring with a pad of a low-resistance metal such as tungsten (W) is currently researched (see, for example, Japanese Patent Laying-Open No. 2004-332046). The technology described in Japanese Patent Laying-Open No. 2004-332046 will be described below. FIGS. 11A to 11D and FIGS. 12A to 12D are diagrams for explaining a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device. FIGS. 11A to 11D are diagrammatic sectional views illustrating a conventional manufacturing method. FIGS. 12A to 12D are diagrams illustrating steps of the conventional manufacturing method. In a conventional method of manufacturing a semiconductor device, first as illustrated in FIG. 11A, a field insulation film 805 is formed on a silicon substrate 802. Then, a gate insulation film 806 is formed on the silicon substrate 802. Next, as illustrated in FIG. 11B, a gate electrode 807 is formed on the gate insulation film 806. Next, an interlayer insulation film 808 is formed on the gate insulation film 806, the gate electrode 807, and the silicon substrate 802. Next, as illustrated in FIG. 11C, a resist pattern 809 is formed on the interlayer insulation film 808. The interlayer insulation film 808 and the gate insulation film 806 are etched using the resist pattern 809 as a mask, and thereby contact holes 810 and

Cancer is one of the main causes of death throughout the world. Diagnosis of cancer is usually based on imaging diagnosis, such as magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) and computed tomography (CT). Since most patients cannot endure repeated CT examination and MRI is expensive, radiomics could be a new method to guide cancer treatment. We conducted a systematic review of literature of computer-aided diagnosis based on radiomics. Relevant studies were identified from PubMed and Embase from the date of inception to May 2019. Quality assessment was performed using QUADAS-2. Meta-analysis was used to make a summary of sensitivity, specificity, diagnostic threshold, area under the receiver operating characteristic curves (AUC), and median of sensitivity and specificity. From the initial 3627 records, we included 19 studies that reported data of 7047 patients. The sensitivity ranged from 0.53 to 0.96 and specificity from 0.63 to 0.97. With a minimum of 10 and a maximum of 300 patients in a single study, the pooled sensitivity of radiomics was 0.87, and the pooled specificity was 0.93. An AUC of 0.87 was reported from one study. No relevant side effects were observed in the reviewed studies. Radiomics can be used to diagnose and predict prognosis in cancer patients, including esophageal cancer, gastrointestinal cancer, rectal cancer, breast cancer, lung cancer, and non-small cell lung cancer. Studies of radiomics in lung, oropharyngeal and hypopharyngeal carcinoma, bladder cancer, and prostate cancer are still scarce. Although radiomics may have great potential in cancer diagnosis and treatment, it requires caution because of the poor quality of the studies. 1c3b36666d
