And when they both get to the bridge, they call the cops together. Love did the trick. The bridge will be closed. After 2 years, they finally get back together. Related Search.Q: Javascript, send_keys() with ajax calls I am currently in the process of refreshing an html page using javascript. To do this I have added a setInterval that refreshes the page every 3 seconds. I have noticed a slight delay before it actually reloads the page. Is there a way I can make sure it all happens before the page loads? I noticed that there is a send_keys() method, but I cannot really put it all in one method as it could lead to errors so I was wondering if I could combine the two functions. Thank you in advance! Here are the two functions. var $newDiv = $('"', { id:'myDiv', text: 'Enter More about you', click: false, data: { target: '#target', action: 'add_div', }, }, ); function addDiv() { $.ajax({ url: "add_div.php", type: "POST", data: 'action=add_div&id=' + $newDiv.attr('id'), success: function() { $('#target').append($newDiv); window.setTimeout(function() { $('#target').append($newDiv); }, 3000 6d1f23a050
