Several programs are available to monitor bandwidth usage, but perhaps the most well known program is used in the following example. Your upload speed will be equal to the download speed of the server, but your download speed will depend on your connection speed. A notification will appear if you download to your computer and your bandwidth is being used on the website. The site will also track your bandwidth and number of downloads for that day. If you stop downloading before the bandwidth is used, there will be a waiting period before your rate is reduced. Because bandwidth usage in the United States is typically metered, some people may be charged if the amount of bandwidth used is higher than the user has agreed to pay. Torrent downloads are very large and take a long time. Use it carefully. An example of a client that will allow
