The most common of the two is the base control that comes with every machine. This provides the programming, memory and interface. These are the basic functions that must be available in order for your machine to work. But not all machines are the same. For example, machines from Sheridan and Brother are not compatible. So it is often necessary to have more than one control in order to cover all the machines that you own. Wilcom also sells a Wilcom Advanced Base Control which has functions such as advanced interface and memories, a display memory function, and a light control. This will cover more than 90% of the machines on the market today. On the other hand, a Wilcom Advanced Professional Control can cover the machines in the market such as Digital Serve, ePo, eView, Pulse-X, Sheridan, and Broadview. There are also advanced interface functions, memories, and light control. Having more than one control is not always an option. In these cases, a Software Upgrade Pack that connects the controls allows for transferring control functions. Wilcom's Software Upgrade Packs can also be used for transferring all the control memory and settings from one control to another. Wilcom also offers other types of software products. Wilcom's Basic programs allow you to create embroidery lists, to perform pre-programmed and customizations on the machine, and to perform more advanced technical functions. These are basically the main functions of any of the Wilcom base controls. Wilcom's Advanced programming provides more advanced user functions and allows you to perform more technical functions. Wilcom's basic buttons such as the control button, startup screen, and threading hold commands will change according to the control program you use. Wilcom's Professional programs are primarily used by embroidery designers, picture embroidery designers, graphic artists, and fine artists. Wilcom's Professional programs include: - Custom Office. - Embroidery Database: Wilcom Programming Software. - Picture Library: Wilcom Processing Software. 8:21 StitchInSite StitchInSite Stitch In Site is a system that is used to upload and download 6d1f23a050
