Spartan: Total Warrior is a 2005 video game developed by Creative Assembly and published by Sega for the PlayStation 2, Xbox and GameCube. This is the first game in the Total War series from developers who have previously worked on Warhammer strategy and Medieval II: Total War. The game tells the story of Spartan warriors fighting against the Roman invaders, in particular, the Ephesus Legion. Players can choose from two possible classes: Spartan swordsman or archer, each with their own abilities. They start the game alone and must fight an enemy that is equal or superior in strength.
